

East African States: Kilwa and Great Zimbabwe

East African states (kingdoms) could almost be considered a "vacation destination" for merchants. The monsoon winds prevented them from leaving for months at a time, so merchants would arrive in East Africa, take care of business, and spend weeks relaxing and enjoying the culture before leaving for their home countries.