

Looking for Community Resources

Families and Crisis

First, you will need to do:

1. You will need to get a "Guide to the Blue Pages" packet.
2. Once you have it, look under the Human Services heading. How many "service areas" exist in the community for a family to access? _____

How many of those services are crisis related? _____

On page 18, there are "crisis lines" listed for people to call. How many hotlines are listed? _____

Next, you will find the service for various "crisis scenarios".

Scenario One: A child reports to their parent that an adult touched them inappropriately. What is the crisis? _____

Who should this family call?

1. Name of Service Provider: _____

2. What service will they provide to the family in crisis?

3. Why is this service important for someone facing a crisis?

Scenario Two: A parent decides that their drinking is out of control, and treatment is needed. What is the crisis? _____

Who should this family call?

1. Name of Service Provider: _____

2. What service will they provide to the family in crisis?

3. Why is this service important for someone facing a crisis?

Name:

Scenario Three: A family is facing eviction and their cupboards are empty.
What is the crisis? _____

Who should this family call?

1. Name of Service Provider: _____

2. What service will they provide to the family in crisis?

3. Why is this service important for someone facing a crisis?

Scenario Four: A parent is concerned that their teen is suffering from depression.
What is the crisis? _____

Who should this family call?

1. Name of Service Provider: _____

2. What service will they provide to the family in crisis?

3. Why is this service important for someone facing a crisis?

Scenario Five: A family just found out that a loved one has cancer. What is the crisis? _____

Who should this family call?

1. Name of Service Provider: _____

2. What service will they provide to the family in crisis?

3. Why is this service important for someone facing a crisis?
